

inkylinky 2024/25

I'm a jeweller and printmaker based in Leeds, and working in Sterling Silver, copper and any other metals as long as they can be etched and textured.

I'm influenced by the English landscape, especially when viewed from the train window, as well as printmaking techniques and the chemical processes which can be used to alter the surface of materials.

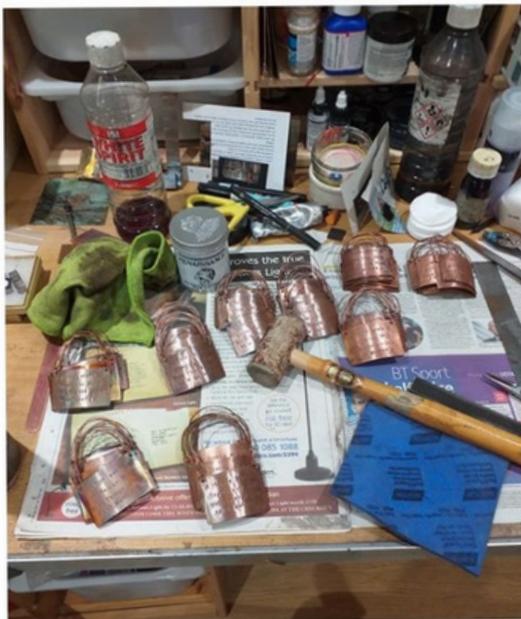

Largely self-taught, having started making jewellery in evening classes around 25 years ago, I have picked up new printmaking and enamelling skills through workshops over this time too. I've been selling in shops and galleries for around 10 years.

I love to experiment and am always looking for ways to combine my two favourite disciplines to make work which is spontaneous, textural, dark, occasionally colourful, and never exactly the same.

Gin Still Jewellery

In 2020 I got an exciting phone call from Cathy Mason, of Mason's Distillery in North Yorkshire. She wanted to commission some gifts for people who had helped out after a fire at the distillery, which had damaged the old still, 'Steve'. I suggested bottle labels and off we went! I collected Steve in my small car, having cut him in half on Cathy's drive (and had a tour of the new distillery), drove him down the A1 and set to on the production line.

100 bottle labels later I still had a lot of Steve left, so have been making jewellery with him using my textures and patination, echoing the natural patina of the copper. Open to ideas for personalised/stamped things too.
